CHAMELEON®
DETECTING THE INVISIBLE™

Operating Instructions
Training Kit
(Part Number: 085130)

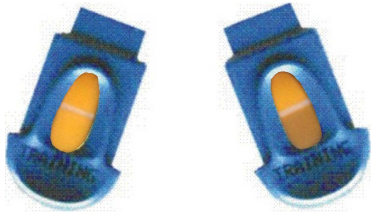

Applications:

The Chameleon is the only hands-free, power-free, chemical detector for gases and vapors in air, allowing First Responders, Firefighters, EMS, Police Officers and Military to detect the presence of hazardous chemicals. No liquid sample required. Developed under funding by the United States Marine Corps, the Chameleon is ideal for users to screen unknown hazards in their environment.

The Chameleon Training Kit includes training cassettes and ampoules. The user squeezes the ampoule to release "smelling salts" (ammonia inhalant), and then holds the ampoule near the cassette. One-half of the cassette window will then change color. The Chameleon training cassette allows the user to view an actual cassette color change in real time. The Training Kit may be used for demonstration purposes or during classroom training.

Specifications:

The chemical sensor in the training cassette shows an easy to see color change upon exposure to the ammonia inhalant ampoule. Half of the sensor window will change color as shown in the example below:

Unexposed Exposed

Description	Reaction Time
Training Cassette	5 seconds

Operating Instructions:

1. The expiration date marked on the packaging assumes storage at 77 °F. Short term storage temperatures between 35 °F and 140 °F are acceptable.
2. At time of use - remove training cassette from its protective pouch.
3. Holding cassette with text facing up, slide cassette into Chameleon armband until the cassette firmly snaps into the armband.
4. Remove an ampoule from box included in the kit.
5. Hold ampoule away from face and crush between thumb and forefinger.
6. Carefully place ampoule to the outer edge of the Chameleon training cassette (edge surrounding "Training").
7. Hold ampoule in place for 5 seconds or until a clear color change is visible in the sensor window. Immediately dispose of ampoule.
8. Discard cassette after color change is observed.
9. Do not reuse cassette.
